4.5 out of 5 with an average rating of 4.25 stars Based on 4,821 votes Still in its early days, Microsoft Office is one of the most popular software suites in the market, with most businesses using it as their main productivity tool. Nonetheless, it also comes with its own share of shortcomings. Most of which are related to the update process which can take days to complete. With most of the documents stored within the system, users are tasked to manually move them to a backup location to ensure their security and compatibility with future updates. More often than not, users are greeted with errors or complications on their new updates. This becomes especially problematic when they have to work remotely as they can no longer download and use the software for the duration of the update. For the users that have multiple installations of Office on their computers, the process becomes aggravating and time-consuming. Although the utility is available for free, it does not come with the features needed to adequately manage your documents, especially when you have a large number of them. Moreover, the design is no longer as user-friendly as it once was, having since been updated with several new features as well as improved visual aspects. It does not come as a big surprise for tech-savvy users that the program has seen an overhaul several times over the years. This being more, if you have a Windows OS that uses the 64-bit version of Office, you have to use the 64-bit version of Office Add-ins. You should know that the program includes a separate install for all Office Add-ins. The reason behind this decision is to reduce the strain on the system's memory when you are using several. Despite all the improvements made, the application still lacks most of the basic features most users need such as rendering documents in.docx and.odt formats or the capability to import or export its own files as this service is currently only available for.pps,.mdb,.xls and.xlsx files. However, if you want to downsize the Word documents, you can create a.docx out of a template or a spreadsheet. If you are interested in importing the files to Office 365, then you should know that the feature is only available for those that have Office 365. If you do not possess the full features set of the program, you can always create a trial version and test drive it. Regardless, the company is quick to inform you
